Prospector® Releases Regulatory Snapshots in New Enhanced Membership Level

Prospector, the leader in ingredient and raw material technical information exchange, has announced the latest tool for formulators called Prospector Professional. Regulatory Snapshots, the first-gen product, is an indispensable tool for Personal Care & Cosmetics formulators that delivers global regulatory information inside Prospector's product profile pages.

With more than 8,000 new regulations being released each year, formulators are often faced with the question of whether a specific ingredient is regulated on a local or national level throughout the world. Prospector Professional provides members in the Personal Care & Cosmetics industry the ability to see what regulations apply to more than 16,000 product profiles on ULProspector.com.

This easy access to complete regulatory information early in the development process provides formulators a more efficient method to find the right ingredient for the job. With this in mind, Prospector Professional gives companies the ability to focus on products that meet the standards put forth by governing bodies around the globe.

"This will give formulators the ability to see potential hurdles with ingredients early in the development stage," said Pam Walker, Head of Strategic Customer Development. "Having this information from the start can save companies both money and wasted development hours."

Prospector Professional helps shorten the time-intensive and complicated process of gathering pertinent regulatory information for projects.

Prospector members can upgrade to Prospector Professional through the website. Subscriptions for this service are available both monthly and yearly. Additionally, a team membership is available for companies to purchase.
